CITY MAY DEMAND 50-CENT GAS RATE

COUNCIL DOES NOT MAKE AN OFFICIAL MOVE

Cannot Act on Proposed Rates until Gas Company Submits Ordinance

FIGHT IS EXPECTED

Utilities Problem Is Real One with This Council

Although no official action was taken by members of city council Wednesday evening, a discussion among members of the council immediately after the meeting indicated that the city will fight the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. for a 50 cents per 1,000 cubic feet rate when the present contract between the gas company and the city expires on or about March 22. No ordinance has yet been submitted to the council stating the proposal of the company. A card of proposed rates for the next five years in division of two and three year intervals has been given to the council by the gas company.

NO ORDINANCE

The matter was conspicuous by its absence in the regular council proceedings because nothing in the way of legislation can be done at this time. Nevertheless gas was the principal thought in the minds of the city solons for since the announcement that the gas company has proposed rates which are apparently even higher than the present rates residents of the city have been expressing their opinion of the proposal in no whispered tones. Every one of the members of the council has been approached by many residents of the city, all gas users, asking that they do what they can to prevent the proposed schedule from being passed and made law.

After the council meeting had been adjourned after the regular business session, members of the group gathered about different desks in the chamber and discussed the problem which they now face.

If it isn't one thing it is another in the matter of utilities as far as this council, and the one directly preceding it, is concerned. The council is now, and has been, fighting an advanced rate of the Citizens Telephone Co., a decision on which case has been forthcoming for the past two or three years from the public utilities commission.

The question of rates with the Ohio Water Service Co. is another problem facing the city solons.

One of the principal arguments of citizens against the proposed increase in gas rates is that nearly everything else, including wages, is decreasing, while the gas company proposes to increase its cost to the consumer. A statement was made by one member of the council Wednesday evening that gas rate cases of 167 Ohio cities and villages are at the present time pending before the state public utilities commission.

TOLEDO IN MIDST OF HOT GAS RATE FIGHT

TOLEDO, O., Feb. 5.—Toledo finds itself in the midst of one of the most spirited public utility fights in recent years, following city council's action this week in passing an ordinance calling for a gas rate of 50 cents a thousand cubic feet and the company's flat refusal to operate on that basis.

The ordinance provides a 75-cent minimum charge and a constant pressure of four pounds to the square inch. The ordinance also forbids mixing of natural and artificial gas.

The resolution states that the federal farm loan board now has on hand the wheat which could be milled, baked into bread, and given to needy in the stricken portions of the nation by labor now unemployed. Permits to Wed Show Increase

There may be a depression in business, but there doesn't seem to be in marriage licenses if the number recorded during January is compared with the number issued last year.

Although only sixteen couples were sent away with the necessary papers, this represents an increase of two over last year. Fourteen couples were allegedly wed during January, 1930. We say allegedly because they secured their licenses, and if they didn't have a spat before they reached the preacher's, they were probably joined in happy wedlock.

Buster Keaton Is Badly Beaten By Film Beauty

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Feb. 5.—For refusing to satisfy her alleged threatening demand for $25,000 Buster Keaton, motion picture comedian, was severely beaten and his dressing room wrecked by a former film beauty, Kathleen Key, he admitted today.

The studio police overpowered Miss Key and took her to the Culver City police station. She was released without any charge being placed against her.

Miss Key treated the incident as a "joke" and told interviewers to ask Mr Keaton what happened.

Keaton declared "She wrecked my dressing room, she clawed and scratched and tore my clothes."

Keaton said he had bet Miss Key $500 she could not reduce 20 pounds in weight in ten days promising her a part in a motion picture if she would make the weight.

Miss Key accepted the wager but lost only six pounds in the set time. Keaton said he told her "well you tried hard enough here's the $500."

This check Keaton charged "was used over my head to collect more money. Gossip reached the studio officials. Miss Key demanded $4,000 to pay debts and $1,000 for a ticket to China. I agreed to give her $5,000 just so the boss would be stopped. When I offered her a check she demanded $2,000 and I tore up the $5,000 check in her presence and resolved not to give her another check.

"Then the fight started. She manhandled me something awful," Keaton declared.

MARTIAL LAW DECLARED IN QUAKE AREA

DEAD IS NEAR 1,000

New Shocks Raze Temporary Buildings, Report

LONDON, Feb. 5.—Marshal law has been declared at Hastings, New Zealand, one of the two cities razed by Tuesday's earthquake, according to a Central News dispatch from Auckland. This action was taken to prevent looting.

Sunday has been declared a day of mourning throughout all of New Zealand for earthquake victims.

A sharp quake rocked Gisborne, 100 miles northeast of Napier, late Wednesday, sending most of that city's 11,000 inhabitants scurrying to the streets. Little damage was done.

According to a message to the Evening News from Christ church, martial law has also been declared in Napier where marines are patrolling the streets to prevent looting. Desperate hungry men and women are ransacking the ruins of the city in search of food.

WELLINGTON, Feb. 5.—While recurrent tremors continued to rock the Hawke Bay district, hundreds of rescue wokes today counted the dead and cared for the injured in Napier and Hastings, the two cities razed by Tuesday's violent earthquake.

Red Cross officials on the job estimate the death toll will probably total between 200 and 1,000.

Napier and Hastings are being completely evacuated in an effort to prevent the outbreak of disease and pestilence.

Hundreds of injured have been brought to Wellington to be cared for. Others have been sent to Auckland while the remainder are being treated as well as possible in emergency dressing stations erected in the stricken area.

While relief work in Napier, Hastings, Taradale and Green Meadows is well in hand, there was still doubt as to the fate of many inland towns and villages whose communications were cut by the tremors. Airplanes are flying over the interior of North Island seeking other devastated areas.

Renewed shocks at noon today razed a temporary office which had been erected in Hastings and communication with Hastings was disrupted for several hours. The Hastings railway station, which had previously escaped serious damage, also collapsed, hampering the evacuation of the injured and of refugees.

HOSKINS TO FIX BLAME

Franklin-Co Prosecutor Nears End of Probe Into Ohio Pen Disaster.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 5.—Indicating that he expects to seek at least four first degree murder indictments, Don. S. Hoskins, Franklin county prosecutor, declared today that the state's case against the perpetrators of the Easter Monday Penitentiary fire last year depends upon what six or eight convict witnesses will say under oath before the grand jury.

Details of the fire tragedy that took the lives of 320 prisoners will be unfolded to the Franklin county grand jury next month. Among the data to be presented is a report compiled by Joseph D. Clear, special investigator for the state fire marshall's office.

"Our case—the state's case—will rest upon Clear's report," Hoskins said. "And everything depends upon what six or eight convict witnesses will say under oath."

Among the evidence to be submitted to the grand jury, it was understood, is an alleged confession by James Raymond, Akron burglar, that he supplied the candles used in making a crude bomb to set fire to the penitentiary.

The real perpetrator of the fire—a Cleveland robber—died in the fire, it was understood Clear learned. Clear has been investigating the prison disaster since last April.

Hoskins indicated that he believes he has sufficient evidence to definitely fix the blame for the tragedy and to obtain murder indictments. Much of the evidence in Clear's hands, according to "grapevine" reports was secured from a prisoner, suspected of being one of the plotters.

Budd F. Harden?

He hails from Fairfield county,
Stoutsville, I think the place,
'Bout forty-seven years ago
He entered in Life's race.
He went to public schools up there
To Lancaster then rolled,
He's been around in Circleville,
'Bout four years, I've been told.

He is an auto dealer,
Sells Chevrolets I see,
Has interest in Harden-Stevenson Company.
He stands about a five foot six
Or seven, maybe in height.
Dark hair and eyes. His build you ask?
'Bout medium would be right.

A very business sorta chap,
A darn good talker though,
He always says just what he means
Whether a "Yes" or "No."
He's married and he has two kids
If he could have his wish,
I think he'd sell an auto [illegible]
And then go hunt [illegible]

Permits to Wed Show Increase

There may be a depression in business, but there doesn't seem to be in marriage licenses if the number recorded during January is compared with the number issued last year.

Although only sixteen couples were sent away with the necessary papers, this represents an increase of two over last year. Fourteen couples were allegedly wed during January, 1930. We say allegedly because they secured their licenses, and if they didn't have a spat before they reached the preacher's, they were probably joined in happy wedlock.

Safety Director J. Wallace Crist reported to city council Wednesday evening that more business was transacted at Berger hospital in January than in any month since the institution was opened last summer. The sum of $1,142 was received during the month and 16 patients were carried over into February, giving promise of another record report.

The report was very heartily received by the council.

A petition to have a sanitary sewer constructed on the Lancaster-pk from the foot of Main-st to the city limits was filed with city council Wednesday evening by a number of property-owners along the highway. The sanitary sewer is badly needed and in face of the fact that the highway will be paved during the present year by the state, it was indicated that something will be done at once when the petition was referred to the service committee, Frank Baker, chairman, and the city engineer.

Signers of the petition for the sewer were Charles Schlegler, Emma Dennis, Mary Schlegler, Fred Eitel, Charles Jewel, C. F. Landenberger, H. A. Sullivan, Mary Kochensparger, J. W. Buster Keaton Is Badly Beaten By Film Beauty

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Feb. 5.—For refusing to satisfy her alleged threatening demand for $25,000 Buster Keaton, motion picture comedian, was severly beaten and his dressing room wrecked by a former film beauty, Kathleen Key, he admitted today.

The studio police overpowered Miss Key and took her to the Culver City police station. She was released without any charge being placed against her.

Miss Key treated the incident as a "joke" and told interviewers to ask Mr. Keaton what happened.

Keaton declared "She wrecked my dressing room, she clawed and scratched and tore my clothes."

Keaton said he had bet Miss Key $500 she could not reduce 20 pounds in weight in ten days promising her a part in a motion picture if she would make the weight.

Miss Key accepted the wager but lost only six pounds in the set time. Keaton said he told her "well you tried hard enough here's the $500."

This check Keaton charged "was used over my head to collect more money. Gossip reached the studio officials. Miss Key demanded $4,000 to pay debts and $1,000 for a ticket to China. I agreed to give her $5,000 just so the gossip would be stopped. When I offered her a check she demanded $20,000 and I tore up the $5,000 check in her presence and resolved not to give her another check.

"Then the fight started. She manhandled me something awful," Keaton declared.

MARTIAL LAW DECLARED IN QUAKE AREA

DEAD IS NEAR 1,000

New Shocks Raze Temporary Buildings, Report

LONDON, Feb. 5.—Marshal law has been declared at Hastings, New Zealand, one of the two cities razed by Tuesday's earthquake, according to a Central News dispatch from Auckland. This action was taken to prevent looting.

Sunday has been declared a day of mourning throughout all of New Zealand for earthquake victims.

A sharp quake rocked Gisborne, 100 miles northeast of Napier, late Wednesday, sending most of that city's 11,000 inhabitants scurrying to the streets. Little damage was done.

According to a message to the Evening News from Christ church, martial law has also been declared in Napier where marines are patrolling the streets to prevent looting. Desperate hungry men and women are ransacking the ruins of the city in search of food.

WELLINGTON, Feb. 5.—While recurrent tremors continued to rock the Hawke Bay district, hundreds of rescue wokes today counted the dead and cared for the injured in Napier and Hastings, the two cities razed by Tuesday's violent earthquake.

Red Cross officials on the job estimate the death roll will probably total between 700 and 1,000.

Napier and Hastings are being completely evacuated in an effort to prevent the outbreak of disease and pestilence.

Hundreds of injured have been brought to Wellington to be cared for. Others have been sent to Auckland while the remainder are being treated as well as possible in emergency dressing stations erected in the stricken area.

While relief work in Napier, Hastings, Taradale and Green Meadows is well in hand, there was still doubt as to the fate of many inland towns and villages whose communications were cut by the tremors. Airplanes are flying over the interior of North Island seeking other devastated areas.

Renewed shocks at noon today razed a temporary office which had been erected in Hastings and communication with Hastings was disrupted for several hours. The Hastings railway station, which had previously escaped serious damage, also collapsed, hampering the evacuation of the injured and of refugees.

HOSKINS TO FIX BLAME

Franklin-Co Prosecutor Nears End of Probe Into Ohio Pen Disaster.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 5.—Indicating that he expects to seek at least four first degree murder indictments, Don. S. Hoskins, Franklin county prosecutor, declared today that the state's case against the perpetrators of the Easter Monday Penitentiary fire last year depends upon what six or eight convict witnesses will say under oath before the grand jury.

Details of the fire tragedy that took the lives of 320 prisoners will be unfolded to the Franklin county grand jury next month. Among the data to be presented is a report compiled by Joseph D. Clear, special investigator for the state fire marshall's office.

"Our case—the state's case—will rest upon Clear's report," Hoskins said. "And everything depends upon what six or eight convict witnesses will say under oath."

Among the evidence to be submitted to the grand jury, it was understood, is an alleged confession by James Raymond, Akron burglar, that he supplied the candles used in making a crude bomb to set fire to the penitentiary.

The real perpetrator of the fire—a Cleveland robber—died in the fire, it was understood Clear learned. Clear has been investigating the prison disaster since last April.

Hoskins indicated that he believes he has sufficient evidence to definitely fix the blame for the tragedy and to obtain murder indictments. Much of the evidence in Clear's hands, according to "grapevine" reports was secured from a prisoner, suspected of being one of the plotters.

COURT RULING ON DEMURRER AWAITED HERE

Judge Assigned Here, To Rule on Constitutionality of Indictment

MURDER TRIAL SOON

Clevenger Has Had Experience in Murder Case Before

With the trial of Horace Van Horn of Derby for the alleged murder of Winam Lewis, Darby-twp, coming in the near future, attorneys interested in the case are awaiting the decision of Judge Frank M. Clevenger of Wilmington Clinton-co, on demurrers filed by defense attorneys charging that the indictment against Van Horn is not according to the constitution.

Judge Clevenger was here Monday to hear demurrers in the case and ordered that briefs should be submitted to him by Friday. It is expected that his decision will come within a short time after receiving the briefs, possibly the fore part of next week.

Until his decision is handed down on the demurrers nothing in the way of court can be accomplished here because the Van Horn case is the only one on the criminal docket at this time. It is possible that civil cases could be set but Judge Joseph W. Adkins does not want to do anything which will interfere with the progress of the murder trials.

SENT BY MARSHALL

Judge Clevenger has been sent here by Chief Justice Carrington T. Marshall of the Ohio supreme court, after Judge Adkins withdrew voluntarily from the bench after affidavits of relationship were filed by attorneys for Van Horn. They stated that a new judge should be named to hear the case because Tom A. Renick, assistant prosecutor for the state in the trial, is a nephew of Judge Adkins. Justice Marshall came here to hear arguments on the affidavits but Judge Adkins withdrew voluntarily before a decision could be rendered.

The barrister appointed to hear the Van Horn trial has had wide experience as a murder trial judge having sit in Canton, O., Stark-co. courts several years ago in the trial of the slayers of Don Mellett, crusading Canton Daily News editor. Judge Clevenger received much publicity concerning this case when, after a lengthy trial, he read his charge to the jury in just 15 minutes.

GIVEN PAROLE

Mrs. Helen Irene Martindale Rondeybush of Columbus, was paroled by Judge Joseph W. Adkins late Wednesday and released from the county jail after being indicted for bigamy. Her parole is for a period of two years.

Mrs. Rondeybush has been in the county jail for several months but was released Wednesday evening.

Mrs. J. P. Moffit is ill at her home on E. Franklin-st.

DO YOU KNOW?

Budd F. Harden?

He hails from Fairfield county,
Stoutsville, I think the place,
'Bout forty-seven years ago
He entered in Life's race.
He went to public schools up there
To Lancaster then rolled,
e's been around in Circleville,
'Bout four years, I've been told.

He is an auto dealer,
Sells Chevrolets I see,
Has interest in Harden-Stevenson Company.
He stands about a five foot six
Or seven, maybe in height.
Dark hair and eyes. His build you ask?
'Bout medium would be right.

A very business sorta chap.
A darn good talker though.
He always says just what he means
Whether a "Yes" or "No."
He's married and he has two boys.
If he could have his wish,
I think he'd (sell an auto first)
And then go hunt or fish!

GAMBLING ON TREASURY CASH IS CAUSE OF MUCH CONCERN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Apparently there is no cure for America's national obsession for gambling on whether stocks will go up or down, whether Babe Ruth will knock one over the fence—whether one sparrow will move off a wire before another, or on the state of the government's finances.

The question of betting on the conditions of the treasury has been given some consideration of the Treasury Department, especially within the last few weeks, because of the frequency with which this matter is being called to the attention of officials, it was learned today.

Lotteries on several sets of figures, including the daily cash balance of the treasury, daily and monthly customs receipts and expenditures, are being conducted. Officials said apparently these lotteries are reaching the proportions of operation on a national scale, but they expressed doubt that anything could be done about it.

A few days ago a letter was received at the Treasury from an individual who said he had been the inmate of a tuberculosis sanitarium, was unable to work but a day or two a week and was having extreme difficulty in supporting his family. He suggested if the Treasury could tip him off what the treasury balance would be the following Friday it would "fix" him up.

Officials said they would continue to make public the daily statement unless the gambling developed into a serious "national scandal." They admitted it would be useless to eliminate any particular set of figures in the statement, since the number-game gamblers would transfer the basis of their lotteries to other figures.

The daily statement is issued under treasury regulations, the first having been published in January 1895. For years, prior thereto a daily statement of the finances had been prepared in pen and ink but was not issued to the public. It was found highly convenient for administrative purposes and now considered virtually indispensable.

The only law providing for publication of periodical statements of the financial situation is in the revised statutes, Section 267, which required the secretary of the treasury to publish once a month in a newspaper at the seat of government certain figures. The daily statement is now issued in lieu of that requirement.

On July 1, 1930, Secretary Mellon issued new regulations which expanded the form of the daily statement to include a considerable mass of financial detail which had not before been published.

W. O. Woods, has issued orders prohibiting employes from giving out information relative to the daily statement. He explained that it is impossible to prevent advance knowledge of figures on the daily statement from getting into the hands of a number of employes of the Treasury Department.

Under-secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills is said to have considered the matter carefully. Some officials were in favor of suspending the daily statement and making weekly or monthly publications, although from an administrative standpoint this would be a decided handicap. Issuance of a statement daily for the information of a number of high officials probably would not be feasible as it would be handled by messengers and others and might lead to more corruption than though issued publicly.

SCIOTO-CO TO HANDLE CASES

PORTSMOUTH, O., Feb. 4.—Federal aid to clean up Green-twp Scioto county, so-called "badlands" of southern Ohio, will not be asked at present, at was announced today following a conference between Prosecutor Cameron Meacham and Sheriff Maurice J. Caldwell.

Both officials said the job is one for local authorities and declared they were able to cop with the situation. If county officers fail, then a squad of federal prohibition agents will be asked to assist, they said.

The drive against the owners of stills and liquor houses in the district was in full force yesterday but the contemplated arrest of William G. "Bill" Porter, who officers say is the head of the largest liquor ring in the section, failed. Porter is wanted on three secret indictments recently returned by the grand jury charging him with manufacturing liquor, bigamy and adultery. It was learned that the reputed "king" is on a visit to Grand Rapids, Mich.

Porter, who is a brother of deputy Sheriff C. C. Porter, is believed to have been informed by an official concerning the secret indictments against him. Sheriff Caldwell threatened to discharge the officer who gave this information.

The center of the reputed liquor gang is located at Ohio Furnace, situated in a dense wilderness covering miles of hill land adjoining the Lawrence county line. Many years ago it was a respectable community which furnished large quantities of iron ore for steel mills. The abandoned ore mines make ideal places for moonshining and officers say the hills are infested with stills.

William Porter is father of Elijah Porter, 17, who allegedly shot and killed his cousin, William Gallion, 23, near a still several weeks ago Young Porter was charged with manslaughter but the grand jury passed the case stating in a special report that it was unable to bring indictments because of the intimidation and threats against witnesses.

Several constables told the jury they were afraid to testify for fear of bodily harm They also said they were afraid their homes would be burned. The constables declared they have received numerous threatening letters to the effect that their graves are already dug and waiting their remains as soon as the opportuniy to kill them is afforded.

"Alfalfa Bill"

OKLAHOMA is a picturesque and spectacular state. Her people are picturesque and spectacular-loving. Her oil fields and gushers are more so. Even her governors are picturesque No other state so consistently peoples its executive mansion with "characters" as does Oklahoma.

The country has not yet forgotten "Cowboy Jack" Walton and his celebrated barbecue maugural. And Governor Walton was but one of a string of eight "characters" to fill the office of governor of Oklahoma, the just inaugurated "Alfalfa Bill" Murray being the eighth.

"Professional hillbilly" and "self-appointed backwoods Moses promising to lead the Oklahoma farmers back to prosperity" are the highly descriptive phrases applied to "Alfalfa Bill." That nickname he does not resent; on the contrary he encourages it. His inauguration was planned so as to paint him as a simple farmer, riding to the capital on borrowed money, moving into the executive mansion—the big house—with no other possessions than the clothes on his back and his famous wagonload of books. It is a character he has played for years.

As a matter of fact, Governor Murray is a student and a very shrewd politician. He has been cotton-picker, cowboy, farmer, school teacher, lawyer and politician. He drafted the laws of the Chickasaw Indian Nation and was president of the convention which drafted Oklahoma's constitution, authorship of its dozens of freak provisions being ascribed to him. Some years ago he lost all his money in an ill-fated American expedition to colonize a land grant in Bolivia.

Give "Alfalfa Bill" credit for knowing what the voters of his state wanted and for giving it to them in himself, made to order.

Ritchie's Bid

AS usual the most interesting speculation about politics runs far ahead. Americans far surpass Metternich, who said his spirit always wrestled with tomorrow. The American political spirit often wrestles with year after next. Just now it is wrestling with events and possibilities nearly 18 months away and the all-important question is who will be the presidential nominees.

Rumor has 10,000 tongues at this time. Predictions, guesses and surmises are rife. Political significance is seen in every word and act of avowed and suspected candidates and possible dark-horses The whole political scene is colored by 1932.

With that state inauguration Governor Ritchie played national politics. His avoidance of mention of state issues and religious devotion to national issues could have had no other purpose than to bring the speaker himself to the fore as a presidential aspirant. It was the keynote speech of the Ritchie campaign

The Maryland executive's bid was superfluous and probably premature. His ambition was no secret, but it might have been good Ritchie politics to leave certain Democratic platform sores unopened and to forget some of those polemical Ritchie policies until later in the group of catching the nomination.

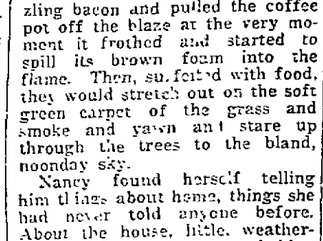
Art Has Its Day

IT is not especially complimentary either to painters or connoisseurs that the American school had to wait for a business depression to be recognized, but that is what happened and they will make the best of it if they are more wise than proud

When the rich and the rich had more money than they knew what to do with, which was not a hyperbole during the years of peak prosperity they patronized foreign art marts because there the prices were higher than in the home market It probably did not occur to them that the reason contemporary art brought better prices abroad than in the United States was because Americans expected to pay more for it irrespective of any difference in quality as such

Then came the depression and cultural America retrenched It began to regard American art shrewdly It was art and it was cheaper than works of prosperity's favorites the old masters, and the modern French school According to the American Art Dealers Association "many collectors have been made aware of the values to be found in American art by economic pressure which forced their ever-present collector's instinct into less costly channels."

American artists should look upon this change of fortunes as an opportunity. With years of obscurity behind them, $20,000,000 (the sum paid for American art works last year) is a lot of recognition And when the world is buying American art an excellent opportunity is presented for that art to sell itself permanently to art buyers A world market of $250,000,000 a year is worth working for.



THAT you should make boosting a habit with the home city as the motto for

You should want it to be solid and progressive and to be known everywhere as a live, up-to-date growing city

Now is the time for every citizen to get busy and start helping them selves by helping their city

It does not pay to take too much for granted Just because the outlook is so good as to sign that your city will get its full share of everything

Nothing much ever comes to the city that is always waiting for something good to show up

It takes organized effort on the part of all citizens to do things worth while It takes the same kind of effort to get things worth while

A CITY SHOULD AIM TO BE SUCCESSFUL IN EVERYTHING IT UNDERTAKES.

"FOREST LOVE" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Nancy Hollenbeck, is the young and beautiful daughter of a poor but socially accepted family. She is warned by her mother against marrying poverty. Nancy, becoming cynical, gives up handsome Mat Tully and begins an affair with Jack Beamer, married to wealth. Jack plans to divorce his wife and marry Nancy. On a trip to Yellowstone, Nancy meets Roger Decatur, a ranger. The Porters, rich but dull relatives, arrive. Nancy plans to use them as chaperones on a mountain trip to meet Roger. He appears the first night. The Porters are not pleased.

CHAPTER XIV.

SHIVERING in the chill morning before the bright sun had warmed the day, Nancy would slip into her warm riding things, run a comb through her short curly hair, and meet Decatur by the corral, where the mules were already being packed. Camp beds, blankets, foodstuffs. Everything for the High Sierra Camps above the meadows had to go in on mule-back. There were no wagon roads, only the narrow, winding trails.

And riding through the meadows starred with flowers, with the soft wind blowing and the world far away, nothing seemed to matter but the sun and the wind and being alive.

Sometimes, with a short, sharp stab of pain, she thought of Louise sitting with Aunt Ellie on the veranda of the Awahnee, rocking....

Well, Lou's turn would come, after she and Jack Beamer were married. The things she'd do for Louise and mama and papa....

Not a word from Beamer since she had left the Valley. Mail was slow up here in the High Sierras, and the days slid by so fast, so lightly, so full of beauty. Soap bubble days, coming and going so swiftly you could hardly keep count. Full of color and beauty and a strange sort of languor. Unreal days Days in which you weren't yourself at all, but someone else, eating and sleeping and riding and laughing Exulting in the feel of the saddle under you, not caring that your clothes smelled of horseflesh, that your nose was sunburnt, your hands grubby.

Contentment

Roger Decatur was part of the spell. He seemed to understand her every mood. Words were hardly necessary—they could jog along over the trails for an hour, not bothering to speak, grinning at each other expansively, sometimes breaking into absurd little snatches of song.

Lunches were the big event of the day. With the horses tethered to trees and one of Roger's tiny fires burning brightly in its circle of stones near the river bed, she would unpack the fruit and sandwiches while he watched the sizzling bacon and pulled the coffee pot off the blaze at the very moment it frothed and started to spill its brown foam into the flame. Then, surfeited with food, they would stretch out on the soft green carpet of the grass and smoke and yawn and stare up through the trees to the bland, noonday sky.

Nancy found herself telling him things about home, things she had never told anyone before. About the house, little, weather-beaten and genteelly shabby, perched on a Piedmont hillside, between its more pretentious neighbors The Fresse's rambling stone house, closed nearly all year while the family were in Europe or New York, on one side, the Whaley's Italian palace on the other About Mama, who was a cripple, fuming because the Whaleys were getting into society when they weren't anybody at all. "And of course it is absurd," Nancy finished.

"It just goes to show that we haven't any real society in the West anyway. Why, Mrs. Whaley's mother used to do a big family wash every Monday! Honestly! Mama says the girls used to giggle as they passed the yard because she'd be out there with her mouth full of clothespins, and red flannel underwear and crocheted petticoats flapping all around!"

Roger laughed, showing all his even, white teeth. "My mother did her own washing, too, and sometimes some for the neighbors. I used to run the wringer for her when I was a little kid. We lived on a little ranch in Nevada. Great days."

Confidences

"But that—that's different. On a ranch."

"Oh, I don't know. We were sort of poor white trash. Dad was what they used to call a remittance man—got a little money every month from home to keep him away. A bribe as it were. He met my mother up in the Klondike. She was a dance hall girl. Had a mighty sweet voice."

After a little pause he added, "She did her darndest to stick it out but I guess it was the loneliness that got her—she was used to a crowd Dad and I were away on a hunting trip for about ten days, and when we came back she was gone. Lit out with a washing machine salesman. I remember how nice she left the cabin, with the fire all laid and the bacon in the frying pan. Dad said he didn't blame her any, but he didn't want to stay there any more. We worked around the lumber camps in Washington for a while. Dad was killed in an accident in one of the hills about five years ago. Well, he had a pretty fair life . . . his share of fun . . ."

"But his wife, going off like that . . . it's such a terrible thing to do!"

Nancy's eyes were wide with horror. One's MOTHER running away . . . Leaving a bewildered little boy and a heartbroken husband . . .

"I can't imagine any woman . . . being so cruel!"

Roger Decatur grinned, yawned and consulted the watch strapped to his sunburst wrist. "Oh, well, she was only a girl. A pretty girl, Nancy. She meant all right. Only the going got too hard for her, so she gave up. If it were a man, no . . . but a girl . . . shucks! You can't expect too much."

"But, Roger, a girl ought to be willing to play the game like a man! You can't think very much about women if you think that they're all like that, all——"

He stood looking down at her, still laughing. "Well, who'd fancy you'd have ideas like that. You and your pink teas, and what not!"

Nancy looked away, suddenly embarrassed. He teased her good naturedly all the long ride home. "Why you aren't a modern girl at all! You aren't cut out for a society dame, Nancy. You're a throwback. Come on now, come clean, haven't you got some ancestors that aren't blue-blooded? I'll bet you have. How about your dad? I'll bet he's a two-fisted citizen with hair on his chest——"

Nancy looked straight into Roger's twinkling blue eyes and chuckled. How papa would have loved that! Papa who could tell you all about all the prize fighters from John L. Sullivan on, and never read anything but the sport page and Wild West magazines all about shooting and fighting and sudden death. . . .

"Well, my father isn't very fierce. He isn't very well and he works in a bank. But he is always talking about the wild and wooly, and my grandmother Hollenbeck lives in the country—"

"I knew it! You know more about the cows and chickens than you're letting on. Bet you marry a rancher, and have about five kids, all boys. You're the kind—wiry even if you aren't husky. Say, some of the rides we've taken would have knocked out most men. You're built for service, even if you have a pretty face!"

She felt his keen, bright eyes sizing her up appraisingly, approvingly, as he might notice the points of a young heifer or horse. Without the slightest consciousness of her as a girl, without any sentimental interest at all.

Unaccountably her cheeks began to burn. Her heart began an angry beating . . . thump . . . thump . . . thump . . .

She heard herself say in a quivering, unnatural voice: "Oh, isn't that thrilling! I hate to upset all your wonderful detective work, but I never even saw my grandmother, let alone her farm. And if I'm going to marry a rancher—which I am—it isn't the kind you're thinking about. No love in a hovel, thank you! The ranch I'm going to live on about three months in the year is a rich man's hobby. There's electricity and plumbing and a swimming pool and thoroughbred horses and a French car—if you call that the primitive life!"

Nancy put on her prettiest dress, the turquoise organdie she had worn that night with Jack on the river. No one dressed for dinner here in camp, but she didn't care She was suddenly tired of riding breeches and mannish skirts. She wanted to feel herself again her old self . . . gay and frivolous and beloved. . . .

Essie and Gladys sat on their cots and watched her with round, questioning eyes while she powdered her tanned neck and painted her lovely mouth a bold scarlet.

They were already dressed Essie in a bright blue crepe de chine that took every vestige of color out of her light blue eyes, leaving them a staring milk white Gladys was bunchy and florid in pink.

No Incentive

"Why should we?" What is there to dress up for in this dump?" Gladys demanded.

"Oh, just for fun!" Nancy laughed. But the Porter sisters were not responsive. Neither were the elder Porters when they all marched solemnly into the dining room.

Essie and Gladys picked at their food Mrs. Porter said at intervals, "Just think, we could have stayed at the Awahnee. I wouldn't say anything, only I had my mouth all set for a Saturday night dinner. Mrs. Watson described the sweetbreads they had, in cases And avacado cocktail."

"But roast beef is much better for us!" Nancy murmured, passing the baked potatoes.

Mrs. Porter said nothing.

From his place at the other end of the long room, Roger Decatur watched the Porters and their guest with uneasy absorption. To the eager questions of the nice school teachers at his table he gave the most unintelligent answers. No, he wasn't a guide . . . no, he had government business here . . . really couldn't recommend a nice trip, sorry, but he couldn't let anyone accompany him on his inspections to the upper camps . . . that young lady with brown eyes? Oh! well, that was different . . . no, he didn't know much about the rock formation . . .

He couldn't wait to join Nancy for their regular evening walk, but after he was with her there was nothing to say. Their precious comraderie was vanished.

Shingles, the Tired Man's Disease

Elderly People Are More Susceptible to This Painful Skin Eruption, Usually Result of Fatigue.

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.
U. S. Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

ONE of the most annoying conditions that doctors encounter is the ailment called "shingles." It is extremely painful, obstinate and wearing. It is quite disabling when affecting old people.

This disease is usually found in elderly people, but may occur in young adults and children. It is quite rare in persons of middle-age.

Fever is the first conspicuous sign. This is soon followed by a localized skin disturbance. The eruption consists of a group of small blisters, each about the size of a small pea. The skin surrounding these blisters becomes inflamed.

The blisters may form anywhere on the body but usually they follow the course of a nerve They appear most commonly on the abdomen chest neck shoulders or arms

Pain is always present in shingles It may be slight or so severe as to prevent sleep The pain is usually described as darting, burning, drawing or tugging

An acute attack may last from one week to as long as six weeks. In old and feeble individuals shingles may last for months and even for years

The disease has two redeeming features In children the pain is usually slight or entirely absent. Secondly, shingles seldom occur twice in the same individual

The exact cause of shingles is not known, though it is believed to be due to an infection Atmospheric changes, exposure to cold and wet, commonly bring on the attack. The disease is believed by some to be a sign of a run down or fatigued condition. I often speak of it as the tired man's or tired woman's disease.

The treatment is essentially local Care must be taken to protect the parts involved from injury and infection. This is accomplished by daily dressings with antiseptics and soothing lotions

The disease is rarely dangerous to life. Occasionally it is followed by persistent neuralgic pains. This is particularly common when occurring in the aged

Involvement of the eye is a serious but rare complication When this happens the best of skill is demanded in the treatment

It is always best to consult a physician, so that all the necessary precautions should be taken. His advice will lessen the pain and danger of complications

Doctor's 3 RULES Big Help to Bowels

What a joy to have the bowels move like clockwork, every day! It's easy, if you mind these simple rules of a famous old doctor:

1. Drink a big tumblerful of water before breakfast, and several times a day.
2. Get plenty of outdoor exercise without unduly fatiguing yourself.
3. Try for a bowel movement at exactly the same hour every day.

Everyone's bowels need help at times, but the thing to use is Dr Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You'll get thorough cleaning-out, and it won't ease your insides weak and watery. This family doctor's prescription is just fresh, laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other helpful ingredients that couldn't hurt a child. But how it takes up those lazy bowels! How you'd feel with your system rid of all that poisonous waste matter.

Clean up that coated tongue, sweeten that bad breath, and get rid of those bilious headaches. A little Syrup Pepsin will soon free the bowels of all that waste matter that makes the whole system sluggish. You'll eat better, sleep better and feel better.

You'll like the way Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin tastes. The way it works will delight you. Big bottles—all druggists.

"Alfalfa Bill"

OKLAHOMA is a picturesque and spectacular state. Her people are picturesque and spectacular-loving. Her oil fields and gushers are more so. Even her governors are picturesque. No other state so consistently peoples its executive mansion with "characters" as does Oklahoma.

The country has not yet forgotten "Cowboy Jack" Walton and his celebrated barbecue inaugural. And Governor Walton was but one of a string of eight "characters" to fill the office of governor of Oklahoma, the just inaugurated "Alfalfa Bill" Murray being the eighth.

"Professional hillbilly" and "self-appointed backwoods Moses promising to lead the Oklahoma farmers back to prosperity" are the highly descriptive phrases applied to "Alfalfa Bill." That nickname he does not resent; on the contrary he encourages it. His inauguration was planned so as to paint him as a simple farmer, riding to the capital on borrowed money, moving into the executive mansion—the big house—with no other possessions than the clothes on his back and his famous wagonload of books. It is a character he has played for years.

As a matter of fact, Governor Murray is a student and a very shrewd politician. He has been cotton-picker, cowboy, farmer, school teacher, lawyer and politician. He drafted the laws of the Chickasaw Indian Nation and was president of the convention which drafted Oklahoma's constitution, authorship of its dozens of freak provisions being ascribed to him. Some years ago he lost all his money in an ill-fated American expedition to colonize a land grant in Bolivia.

Give "Alfalfa Bill" credit for knowing what the voters of his state wanted and for giving it to them in himself, made to order.

Ritchie's Bid

AS usual the most interesting speculation about politics runs far ahead. Americans far surpass Metternich, who said his spirit always wrestled with tomorrow. The American political spirit often wrestles with year after next. Just now it is wrestling with events and possibilities nearly 18 months away and the all-important question is who will be the presidential nominees.

Rumor has 10,000 tongues at this time. Predictions, guesses and surmises are rife. Political significance is seen in every word and act of avowed and suspected candidates and possible dark-horses. The whole political scene is colored by 1932.

With that state inauguration Governor Ritchie played national politics. His avoidance of mention of state issues and religious devotion to national issues could have had no other purpose than to bring the speaker himself to the fore as a presidential aspirant. It was the keynote speech of the Ritchie campaign.

The Maryland executive's bid was superfluous and probably premature. His ambition was no secret, but it might have been good Ritchie politics to leave certain Democratic platform sores unopened and to forget some of those polemical Ritchie policies until later in the group of catching the nomination.

Art Has Its Day

IT is not especially complimentary either to painters or connoisseurs that the American school had to wait for a business depression to be recognized, but that is what happened and they will make the best of it if they are more wise than proud.

When the rich and near-rich had more money than they knew what to do with, which was not a hyperbole during the years of peak prosperity, they patronized foreign art marts because there the prices were higher than in the home market. It probably did not occur to them that the reason contemporay art brought better prices abroad than in the United States was because Americans expected to pay more for it, irrespective of any difference in quality as art.

Then came the depression and cultural America retrenched. It began to regard American art shrewdly. It was art and it was cheaper than works of prosperity's favorites—the old masters, and the modern French school. According to the American Art Dealers Association, "many collectors have been made aware of the values to be found in American art by economic pressure which forced their ever-present collector's instinct into less costly channels."

American artists should look upon this change of fortunes as an opportunity. With years of obscurity behind them, $20,000,000 (the sum paid for American art works last year) is a lot of recognition. And when the world is buying American art an excellent opportunity is presented for that art to sell itself permanently to art buyers. A world market of $250,000,000 a year is worth working for.

o

THAT you should make boosting a habit, with the home city as the worthy object.

You should want it to be solid and progressive and that it be known everywhere as a live, up-to-date, growing city.

Now is the time for every citizen to get busy and stay busy helping themselves by helping their city.

It does not pay to take too much for granted. Just because the outlook seems good is no sign that your city will get its full share of everything.

Nothing much ever comes to the city that is always waiting for something good to show up.

It takes organized effort on the part of all citizens to do things worth while. It takes the same kind of effort to get things worth while.

A CITY SHOULD AIM TO BE SUCCESSFUL IN EVERYTHING IT UNDERTAKES.

"FOREST LOVE" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Nancy Hollenbeck, is the young and beautiful daughter of a poor but socially accepted family. She is warned by her mother against marrying poverty. Nancy, becoming cynical, gives up handsome Mat Tully and begins an affair with Jack Beamer, married to wealth. Jack plans to divorce his wife and marry Nancy. On a trip to Yellowstone, Nancy meets Roger Decatur, a ranger. The Porters, rich but dull relatives, arrive. Nancy plans to use them as chaperones on a mountain trip to meet Roger. He appears the first night. The Porters are not pleased.

CHAPTER XIV.

SHIVERING in the chill morning before the bright sun had warmed the day, Nancy would slip into her warm riding things, run a comb through her short curly hair, and meet Decatur by the corral, where the mules were already being packed. Camp beds, blankets, foodstuffs. Everything for the High Sierra Camps above the meadows had to go in on mule-back. There were no wagon roads, only the narrow, winding trails.

And riding through the meadows starred with flowers, with the soft wind blowing and the world far away, nothing seemed to matter but the sun and the wind and being alive.

Sometimes, with a short, sharp stab of pain, she thought of Louise sitting with Aunt Ellie on the veranda of the Awahnee, rocking. . . .

Well, Lou's turn would come. . . after she and Jack Beamer were married. The things she'd do for Louise and mama and papa. . . .

Not a word from Beamer since she had left the Valley. Mail was slow up here in the High Sierras, and the days slid by so fast, so slightly, so full of beauty. Soap bubble days, coming and going so swiftly you could hardly keep count. Full of color and beauty and a strange sort of languor. Unreal days. Days in which you weren't yourself at all, but someone else, eating and sleeping and riding and laughing. Exulting in the feel of the saddle under you, not caring that your clothes smelled of horseflesh, that your nose was sunburnt, your hands grubby.

Contentment

Roger Decatur was part of the spell. He seemed to understand her every mood. Words were hardly necessary—they could jog along over the trails for an hour, not bothering to speak, grinning at each other expansively, sometimes breaking into absurd little snatches of song.

Lunches were the big event of the day. With the horses tethered to trees and one of Roger's tiny fires burning brightly in its circle of stones near the river bed, she would unpack the fruit and sandwiches while he watched the sizzling bacon and pulled the coffee pot off the blaze at the very moment it frothed and started to spill its brown foam into the flame. Then, surfeited with food, they would stretch out on the soft green carpet of the grass and smoke and yawn and stare up through the trees to the bland, noonday sky.

Nancy found herself telling him things about home, things she had never told anyone before. About the house, little, weather-beaten and genteelly shabby, perched on a Piedmont hillside, between its more pretentious neighbors. The Freese's rambling stone house, closed nearly all year while the family were in Europe or New York, on one side, the Whaley's Italian palace on the other. About Mama, who was a feebles, fuming because the Whaleys were getting into society when they weren't anybody at all. "And of course it is absurd," Nancy finished.

"It just goes to show that we haven't any real society in the West anyway. Why, Mrs. Whaley's mother used to do a big family wash every Monday! Honestly! Mama says the girls used to giggle as they passed the yard because she'd be out there with her mouth full of clothespins, and red flannel underwear and crocheted petticoats flapping all around!"

Roger laughed, showing all his even, white teeth. "My mother did her own washing, too, and sometimes some for the neighbors. I used to run the wringer for her when I was a little kid. We lived on a little ranch in Nevada. Great days."

Confidences

"But that—that's different. On a ranch."

"Oh, I don't know. We were sort of poor white trash. Dad was what they used to call a remittance man—got a little money every month from home to keep him away. A bribe as it were. He met my mother up in the Klondike. She was a dance hall girl. Had a mighty sweet voice."

After a little pause he added, "She did her darndest to stick it out but I guess it was the loneliness that got her—she was used to a crowd. Dad and I were away on a hunting trip for about ten days, and when we came back she was gone. Lit out with a washing machine salesman. I remember how nice she left the cabin, with the fire all laid and the bacon in the frying pan. Dad said he didn't blame her any, but he didn't want to stay there any more. We worked around the lumber camps in Washington for a while. Dad was killed in an accident in one of the hills about five years ago. Well, he had a pretty fair life . . . his share of fun . . ."

"But his wife, going off like that . . . it's such a terrible thing to do!"

Nancy's eyes were wide with horror. One's MOTHER running away . . . Leaving a bewildered little boy and a heartbroken husband . . .

"I can't imagine any woman . . . being so cruel!"

Roger Decatur grinned, yawned and consulted the watch strapped to his sunburst wrist. "Oh, well, she was only a girl. A pretty girl, Nancy. She meant all right. Only the going got too hard for her, so she gave up. If it were a man, no . . . but a girl. . . shucks! You can't expect too much."

"But, Roger, a girl ought to be willing to play the game like a man! You can't think very much about women if you think that they're all like that, all——"

He stood looking down at her, still laughing. "Well, who'd fancy you'd have ideas like that. You and your pink teas, and what not!"

Nancy looked away, suddenly embarrassed. He teased her good naturedly all the long ride home. "Why you aren't a modern girl at all! You aren't cut out for a society dame, Nancy. You're a throwback. Come on now, come clean, haven't you got some ancestors that aren't blue-blooded? I'll bet you have. How about your dad? I'll bet he's a two-fisted citizen with hair on his chest——"

Nancy looked straight into Roger's twinkling blue eyes and chuckled. How papa would have loved that! Papa who could tell you all about all the prize fighters from John L. Sullivan on, and never read anything but the sport page and Wild West magazines all about shooting and fighting and sudden death. . . .

"Well, my father isn't very fierce. He isn't very well and he works in a bank. But he is always talking about the wild and wooly, and my grandmother Hollenbeck lives in the country—"

"I knew it! You know more about the cows and chickens than you're letting on. Bet you marry a rancher, and have about five kids, all boys. You're the kind—wiry even if you aren't husky. Say, some of the rides we've taken would have knocked out most men. You're built for service, even if you have a pretty face!"

She felt his keen, bright eyes sizing her up appraisingly, approvingly, as he might notice the points of a young heifer or horse. Without the slightest consciousness of her as a girl, without any sentimental interest at all.

Unaccountably her cheeks began to burn. Her heart began an angry beating. . . thump. . . thump . . thump. . .

She heard herself say in a quivering, unnatural voice: "Oh, isn't that thrilling! I hate to upset all your wonderful detective work, but I never even saw my grandmother, let alone her farm. And if I'm going to marry a rancher—which I am—it isn't the kind you're thinking about. No love in a hovel, thank you! The ranch I'm going to live on about three months in the year is a rich man's hobby. There's electricity and plumbing and a swimming pool and thoroughbred horses and a French car—if you call that the primitive life!"

Nancy put on her prettiest dress, the turquoise organdie she had worn that night with Jack on the river. No one dressed for dinner here in camp, but she didn't care. She was suddenly tired of riding breeches and mannish skirts. She wanted to feel herself again . . . her old self. . . gay and frivolous and beloved. . . .

Essie and Gladys sat on their cots and watched her with round, questioning eyes while she powdered her tanned neck and painted her lovely mouth a bold scarlet.

They were already dressed. Essie in a bright blue crepe de chine that took every vestige of color out of her light blue eyes, leaving them a staring milk white. Gladys was bunchy and florid in pink.

No Incentive

"Why should we?" What is there to dress up for in this dump?" Gladys demanded.

"Oh, just for fun!" Nancy laughed. But the Porter sisters were not responsive. Neither were the elder Porters when they all marched solemnly into the dining room.

Essie and Gladys picked at their food. Mrs. Porter said at intervals, "Just think, we could have stayed at the Awahnee. I wouldn't say anything, only I had my mouth all set for a Saturday night dinner. Mrs. Watson described the sweetbreads they had, in cases. And avacado cocktail."

"But roast beef is much better for us!" Nancy murmured, passing the baked potatoes.

Mrs. Porter said nothing.

From his place at the other end of the long room, Roger Decatur watched the Porters and their guest with uneasy absorption. To the eager questions of the nice school teachers at his table he gave the most unintelligent answers. No, he wasn't a guide . . . no, he had government business here. . . really couldn't recommend a nice trip. . . sorry, but he couldn't let anyone accompany him on his inspections to the upper camps. . . that young lady with brown eyes? Oh! well, that was different. . . no, he didn't know much about the rock formation. . . .

He couldn't wait to join Nancy for their regular evening walk, but after he was with her there was nothing to say. Their precious comraderie was vanished.

Shingles, the Tired Man's Disease

Elderly People Are More Susceptible to This Painful Skin Eruption, Usually Result of Fatigue.

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.
U. S. Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

ONE of the most annoying conditions that doctors encounter is the ailment called "shingles." It is extremely painful, obstinate and wearing. It is quite disabling when affecting old people.

This disease is usually found in elderly people, but may occur in young adults and children. It is quite rare in persons of middle-age.

Fever is the first conspicuous sign. This is soon followed by a localized skin disturbance. The eruption consists of a group of small blisters, each about the size of a small pea. The skin surrounding these blisters becomes inflamed.

The blisters may form anywhere on the body, but usually they follow the course of a nerve. They appear most commonly on the abdomen, chest, neck, shoulders or arms.

Pain is always present in shingles. It may be slight, or so severe as to prevent sleep. The pain is usually described as darting, burning, drawing or tugging.

An acute attack may last from one week to as long as six weeks. In old and feeble individuals shingles may last for months and even for years.

The disease has two redeeming features: In children the pain is usually slight or entirely absent. Secondly, shingles seldom occur twice in the same individual.

The exact cause of shingles is not known, though it is believed to be due to an infection. Atmospheric changes, exposure to cold and wet, commonly bring on the attack. The disease is believed by some to be a sign of a run-down or fatigued condition. I often speak of it as the tired man's or tired woman's disease.

The treatment is essentially local. Care must be taken to protect the parts involved from injury and infection. This is accomplished by daily dressings with antiseptics and soothing lotions.

The disease is rarely dangerous to life. Occasionally it is followed by persistent neuralgic pains. This is particularly common when occurring in the aged.

Involvement of the eye is a serious but rare complication. When this happens the best of skill is demanded in the treatment.

It is always best to consult a physician, so that all the necessary precautions should be taken. His advice will lessen the pain and danger of complications.

Doctor's 3 RULES
Big Help to Bowels

What a joy to have the bowels move like clockwork, every day! It's easy, if you mind these simple rules of a famous old doctor:

1. Drink a big tumblerful of water before breakfast, and several times a day.
2. Get plenty of outdoor exercise without unduly fatiguing yourself.
3. Try for a bowel movement at exactly the same hour every day.

Everyone's bowels need help at times, but the thing to use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You'll get a thorough cleaning-out, and it won't leave your insides weak and watery. This family doctor's prescription is just fresh, laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other helpful ingredients that couldn't hurt a child. But how it wakes up those lazy bowels! How good you feel with your system rid of all that poisonous waste matter.

Clean up that coated tongue, sweeten that bad breath, and get rid of those bilious headaches. A little Syrup Pepsin will soon free the bowels from all that waste matter that makes the whole system sluggish. You'll eat better, sleep better and feel better.

You'll like the way Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin tastes. The way it works will delight you. Big bottles—at drugstores.

BANKER AGAINST PAYMENT OF SOLDIERS BONUS CASH

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—The influence of the American Bankers Association was directed today against the proposals in Congress to pay the $3,500,000,000 veterans bonus certificates in cash.

Testifying before the House Ways and Means Committee, Rome C. Stephenson, of South Bend, Ind., president of the Bankers Association, declared that payment of the bonus would plunge the country into another economic depression.

"I have the viewpoint of this proposition of many of my associates in banking and in the American Bankers Association," he said. "Universally they are unalterably opposed to it strictly on the principle of sound public policy."

Stephenson said that floating a huge bond issue to pay the certificates would depress the price of bonds, perhaps raise taxes and make more difficult the financing of legitimate industry.

"I believe that if the members of the Legion fully realized the seriousness of the proposed legislation, how seriously it would affect the financial structure of our country, there would be no demand whatever among them that the legislation be passed at this time.

"If any of the proposed measures for this purpose are enacted into law, it is quite possible that the results thereof would be so serious that in the future the public would be inclined to oppose the passage of other really deserving bills for the relief of the World war veterans."

He reiterated the belief of other financial leaders who have appeared before the committee, that a gradual business revival is ahead.

"However," he said, "if this bonus plan payment is to eventuate it would seem that the hopes are ill-founded—that there is still another depressing econonomic surprise in store for the country to struggle with before it can consider itself on the clear highway to better times.

"I believe we can say without equivocation that, even though a temporary stimulation for business and a limited benefit to a few deserving ones would result from the distribution to the veterans of the tremendous sum of cash, the broad general economic effect would be severely adverse and would still further retard our recovery from the depression. In the long run it would harm far more than it would help. There are certainly better ways of helping the relatively few than by harming the overwhelming many."

SMITH WINS NEW TRIAL

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 5.—A new trial for Tilby Smith, convicted wife-slayer of Ashtabula, was ordered by the Ohio supreme court when the state tribunal upheld the decision of the Ashtabula county appellate court.

The court of appeals reversed the decision of the trial court in refusing to grant the alleged murdered a new trial on the grounds that the judge erred in refusing to permit Smith to waive trial by jury and place himself on the mercy of the court.

The new trial for Smith, young Ashtabula county trucking contractor, will be held in the common pleas court of Ashtabula county. No date has yet been set.

Smith was convicted of first-degree murder by a jury which failed to recommend mercy, making the death sentence mandatory. He was sentenced to be executed in the electric chair this month.

The contractor's wife, Clara, was shot and killed the night of last May 29 as she sat in her husband's automobile holding one of her two small sons. The slaying occurred on a lonely road near Jefferson while Smith and his family were enroute to the home of relatives to spend Memorial Day.

It was charged that Maude Lowther, quarter-breed Indian girl, fired the shot that killed Mrs. Smith. She was also charged with murder in the first degree but has never been brought to trail.

Officials said that Smith and Mrs. Lowther planned the killing so that their illicit love affair of 10 days could be carried on without interruption.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

Smith was convicted of first-degree murder by a jury which failed to recommend mercy, making the death sentence mandatory. He was sentenced to be executed in the electric chair this month.

The contractor's wife, Clara, was shot and killed the night of last May 29 as she sat in her husband's automobile holding one of her two small sons. The slaying occurred on a lonely road near Jefferson while Smith and his family were enroute to the home of relatives to spend Memorial Day.

It was charged that Maude Lowther, quarter-breed Indian girl, fired the shot that killed Mrs. Smith. She was also charged with murder in the first degree but has never been brought to trail.

Officials said that Smith and Mrs. Lowther planned the killing so that their illicit love affair of 10 days could be carried on without interruption.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

CAMPBELL MAY TRY FOR MARK SOMETIME TODAY HE BELIEVES

BY JAMES L. KILGALLEN.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Feb. 5.—"I'm keen to do 260 miles an hour, officially, just to prove that it can be done."

Captain Malcolm Campbell of England, fastest automobile driver in the world, made this assertion to the writer here today as he made ready for a crack at shattering the world's record of 231.36 miles an hour. He may "go" this afternoon.

"I am not going to be unduly reckless but I intend to make one fast run down the ocean speedway and step it up to 260 or thereabouts," said the debonair, matter-of-fact Englishman. "I know this Bluebird car of mine can do it."

Racing last Tuesday Campbell attained the astounding speed, according to his own computation, of 260 miles an hour. This, of course, was unofficial. Some folks hereabouts, who didn't see the run, opine that is mighty fast. Evidently some doubt exists that it is possible to drive a car that fast.

I will take the Captain's word for it that he was hitting 260 when his gears slipped. He certainly was whizzing along. Half a mile after the gear mishap the Captain's car contacted the wire at the start of the "measured mile." Even though he coasted this mile in neutral he was officially timed at 198 miles an hour for the mile. It was obvious that he had suddenly slowed down considerably.

When he shoots for the record he will be officially timed twice over the measured mile—once running in a southerly direction, and again when he races north.

To eclipse the world's record of the late Sir Henry Segrave he must average over these two miles a speed in excess of 231.36 miles an hour.

"I will be pleased, of course, if I beat the record no matter how small the margin," Campbell told International News Service in an interview. "But when I said I made 260 unofficially I wasn't jollying anyone. I am not much for swank or boasting. That is why I want to go at least 260 officially on one of the runs down the course.

"I don't want to give the impression that what I am aiming at is a two-way average of 260. After all, what I'm here for is to break the record of 231, and I am confident I can do it."

Win, lost or draw, the colorful Campbell has already put on quite a show. He has raced when conditions along the nine-mile sandy beach were anything but perfect. He has shown he is a chap who will take a "long chance."

Asked how his nerves are as a result of the strain he has been under, Campbell replied:

"All right, I'm never bothered by nerves."

TUT TO SIGN FOR M'ARDLE

Lad Who Plastered Petrolle Ready to Again Fight Fargo Express, He Says.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Tom M'Cardle, Madison Square Garden matchmaker, today was to sign King Tut, the tow-headed slugger of Minneapolis for a return bout with Billy Petrolle of Fargo here on Feb. 27. Everything was set for signing the bout today, M'Cardle said.

By derailing the Fargo Express in 24 seconds at St. Paul on Monday night, Tut became the pugilistic sensation of the hour.

Nate Lewis wants to put him against Petrolle at the Chicago Stadium and other offers are pouring in. The Minneapolis veteran should be a sell-out against Petrolle, Tommy Freeman, Jimmy McLarnin or Jack Berg, and even though he would weaken himself in whittling off three and a half pounds to make the 135 pound limit, he would be strong enough to give Tony Canzoneri, the lightweight champion, plenty of trouble.

Apparently McLarnin, Freeman, Berg and Canzoneri want no part of Tut. His clowning, his unorthodox delivery and the dynamite in his right hand make the stocky, barrell-chested Minneapolis terror a tough proposition. Berg soon will leave for Miami Beach to bake out his sore shoulder on the Florida sands, and McLarnin and Canzoneri have maintained a discreed silence whenever Tut's name was mentioned.

Even though he coasted this mile in neutral, he was officially timed at 198 miles an hour for the mile. It was obvious that he had suddenly slowed down considerably.

When he shoots for the record he will be officially timed twice over the measured mile—once running in a southerly direction, and again when he races north.

To eclipse the world's record of the late Sir Henry Segrave he must average over these two miles a speed in excess of 231.36 miles an hour.

"I will be pleased, of course, if I beat the record—no matter how small the margin," Campbell told International News Service in an interview. "But when I said I made 260 unofficially I wasn't jollying anyone. I am not much for swank or boasting. That is why I want to go at least 260 officially on one of the runs down the course.

"I don't want to give the impression that what I am aiming at is a two-way average of 260. After all, what I'm here for is to break the record of 231, and I am confident I can do it."

Win, lost or draw, the colorful Campbell has already put on quite a show. He has raced when conditions along the nine-mile sandy beach were anything but perfect. He has shown he is a chap who will take a "long chance."

Asked how his nerves are as a result of the strain he has been under, Campbell replied:

"All right, I'm never bothered by nerves."

TUT TO SIGN FOR M'ARDLE

Lad Who Plastered Petrolle Ready to Again Fight Fargo Express, He Says.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Tom M'Cardle, Madison Square Garden matchmaker, today was to sign King Tut, the tow-headed slugger of Minneapolis for a return bout with Billy Petrolle of Fargo here on Feb. 27. Everything was set for signing the bout today, M'Cardle said.

By derailing the Fargo Express in 24 seconds at St. Paul on Monday night, Tut became the pugilistic sensation of the hour.

Nate Lewis wants to put him against Petrolle at the Chicago Stadium and other offers are pouring in. The Minneapolis veteran should be a sell-out against Petrolle, Tommy Freeman, Jimmy McLarnin or Jack Berg, and even though he would weaken himself in whittling off three and a half pounds to make the 135 pound limit, he would be strong enough to give Tony Canzoneri, the lightweight champion,plenty of trouble.

Apparently McLarnin, Freeman, Berg and Canzoneri want no part of Tut. His clowning, his unorthodox delivery and the dynamite in his right hand make the stocky, barrell-chested Minneapolis terror a tough proposition. Berg soon will leave for Miami Beach to bake out his sore shoulder on the Florida sands, and McLarnin and Canzoneri have maintained a discreed silence whenever Tut's name was mentioned.

SEARS READY FOR DRY WORK

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 5.—Reorganization of the state prohibition department "in line with efficiency that is necessary" will start Monday, Clarence H. Sears, Chillicothe, the new commissioner, whose appointment was confirmed by the senate yesterday with only one dissenting vote, announced today.

Commissioner Sears paid his first visit to his new office today, talked a while with Prohibition Commissioner Rupert R. Beetham, and beyond stating that "we may find it advisable to increase some salaries in the interests of efficiency" was unwilling to discuss his program.

The retiring commissioner will vacate prohibition headquarters on Saturday and his successor will begin his new duties Monday.

Only Senator Joseph N. Ackerman(R) of Cleveland wet leader, voted against confirmation of Sears yesterday.

"I'll have to vote against confirmation, not because I am opposed to the men, but to the office," Senator Ackerman said.

"In a few days I am going to show the senate just how unnecessary this department has become," he declared.

Though long an ardent, dry, Sears has no intention of forcing everyone to quit drinking, he said today.

SEARS READY FOR DRY WORK

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 5.—Reorganization of the state prohibition department "in line with efficiency that is necessary" will start Monday, Clarence H. Sears, Chillicothe, the new commissioner, whose appointment was confirmed by the senate yesterday with only one dissenting vote, announced today.

Commissioner Sears paid his first visit to his new office today, talked a while with Prohibition Commissioner Rupert R. Beetham, and beyond stating that "we may find it advisable to increase some salaries in the interests of efficiency" was unwilling to discuss his program.

The retiring commissioner will vacate prohibition headquarters on Saturday and his successor will begin his new duties Monday.

Only Senator Joseph N. Ackerman(R) of Cleveland wet leader, voted against confirmation of Sears yesterday.

"I'll have to vote against confirmation, not because I am opposed to the men, but to the office," Senator Ackerman said.

"In a few days I am going to show the senate just how unnecessary this department has become," he declared.

Governor White appointed Sears about noon yesterday and confirmation was obtained within three hours. Senators Milton J. Scott (R) of Chillicothe and William I. Spangler (D) of Tarlton appealed to the senate to give him a unanimous vote.
